Public computers and networks might be safe, but don't rely on this. It's likely they are not.

A black and white photograph showing a long, winding trail of footprints in a snowy landscape. The trail starts at the top center and curves downwards and to the right, ending near the bottom right corner. The snow is bright and textured, with some shadows and highlights. The footprints are dark and clearly visible against the white snow.

Reverse image search

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Reverse image search is a content-based image retrieval (CBIR) query technique that involves providing the CBIR system with a sample image that it will then base its search upon; in terms of information retrieval, the sample image is what formulates a search query. In particular, reverse image search is characterized by a lack of search terms. This effectively removes the need for a user to guess at keywords or terms that may or may not return a correct result. Reverse image search also allows users to discover content that is related to a specific sample image,^[1] popularity of an image, and discover manipulated versions and derivative works.^[2]

ABOUT US

StartPage protects your privacy!

StartPage, and its sister search engine Ixquick, are the only third-party certified search engines in the world that do not record your IP address or track your searches.

Your privacy is under attack!

Every time you use a regular search engine, your search data is recorded. Major search engines capture your IP address and use tracking cookies to make a record of your search terms, the time of your visit, and the links you choose - then they store that information in a giant database.

Those searches reveal a shocking amount of personal information about you, such as your interests, family circumstances, political leanings, medical conditions, and more. This information is modern-day gold for marketers, government officials, black-hat hackers and criminals - all of whom would love to get their hands on your private search data.

Why should you worry?

Major search engines have secretly amassed the largest databases of personal information on

Overview

Privacy Badger automatically learns to block invisible trackers.

Instead of keeping lists of what to block, Privacy Badger learns by watching which domains appear to be tracking you as you browse the Web.

Privacy Badger sends the Do Not Track signal (<https://www.eff.org/issues/do-not-track>) with your browsing. If trackers ignore your wishes, your Badger will learn to block them. Privacy Badger starts blocking once it sees the same tracker on three different websites.

Besides automatic tracker blocking, Privacy Badger removes outgoing link click tracking on Facebook, Google and Twitter, with more privacy protections on the way.

Edward Snowden, Whistleblower and privacy advocate

“ Signal is the most scalable encryption tool we have. It is free and peer reviewed. I encourage people to use it everyday.

Laura Poitras, Oscar-winning filmmaker and journalist

“ I am regularly impressed with the thought and care put into both the security and the usability of this app. It's my first choice for an encrypted conversation.

Bruce Schneier, internationally

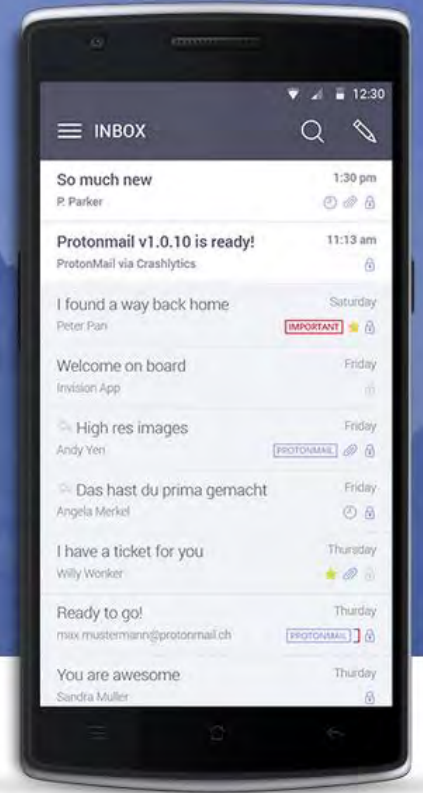

“ After reading the code, I literally discovered a line of drool running down my face. It's really nice.
